

I think it would be much cheaper and simpler for all parties involved if funding for schools were allocated based on poverty count, similar to the way federal program funds are allocated. Schools could receive a dollar amount per poverty count each year. This would certainly reduce cost of administration and would be a much more stable approach than the current process.